Iowa Poultry Association Announces Recipient of Hall of Fame Award

Urbandale, IA, August 27, 2018— Iowa Poultry Association (IPA) has announced the recipient of their Hall of Fame Award, ahead of the annual Fall Festival. The Hall of Fame award will be presented to Joe Scallon, of Ham and Eggs in Iowa Falls, Iowa. The honoree will be awarded at the banquet of the 48th Annual Fall Festival, September 19th 2018, at the Marriott in West Des Moines.

Joe Scallon of Iowa Falls, Iowa, has been the owner of Ham and Eggs since 1998, and owner of The Good Egg LLC since 2013. Iowa Poultry Association Executive Director, Kevin Stiles said, “Joe was a key part of the recent egg farm video created by Iowa Egg Council (IEC) in 2017, with support from IPA. This also has resulted in Joe’s being a part of the resulting social media campaign in 2018. He has represented egg and poultry farmers extremely well and both IPA and IEC have called upon him often.”

In prior years, Scallon served on the Iowa Egg Council Board of Directors, and has been willing to serve as a spokesperson for the Iowa egg & poultry industry with the media and consumer audiences. Examples of Scallon’s media efforts include during the 2015 HPAI outbreak and numerous speaking engagements at key civic and business meetings and gatherings.

Scallon has proven to be an active member and very engaged in both IPA and IEC through the years. He has demonstrated a willingness to step up and support the association and the industry whenever asked.

Scallon and his wife Linda are the proud parents of Sara, Mark, Amy, and John. They are active in their community and their church. Scallon has served on the board Ellsworth Community College Foundation Board of Directors, the Board of Trustees at the Iowa Falls United Methodist Church, and the Iowa Falls School Board.

Join us in West Des Moines, Iowa as we honor Joe Scallon. Registration and full schedule information is available online at www.iowapoultry.com
